Did you know . . . !

It is unknown precisely where and when the phrase "trick or treat" was coined, but the custom had been firmly established in American popular culture by 1951, when trick-or-treating was depicted in the Peanuts comic strip. In 1952, Disney produced a cartoon called "Trick or Treat" featuring Donald Duck and his nephews Huey, Dewey and Louie.

Good v Bad Luck.....?

"A common superstition is the belief that opening an umbrella inside a house causes bad luck. The origin of this is that the umbrella acts as a shield against the sun or rain outdoors. To open it indoors offends the spirit of the umbrella, and will cause bad luck to occur as a result."

WARDING OFF GHOSTS

The tradition of dressing in costume for Halloween has both European and Celtic roots. Hundreds of years ago, winter was an uncertain and frightening time. Food supplies often ran low and, for the many people afraid of the dark, the short days of winter were full of constant worry. On Halloween, when it was believed that ghosts came back to the earthly world, people thought that they would encounter ghosts if they left their homes. To avoid being recognized by these ghosts, people would wear masks when they left their homes after dark so that the ghosts would mistake them for fellow spirits. To keep ghosts away from their houses, people would place bowls of food outside their homes to appease the ghosts and prevent them from attempting to enter.

HALLOWEEN TRIVIA

- *When candy corn was first created in the 1880s by the Wunderle Candy Company, it was sold in boxes featuring a rooster logo under the literal name "Chicken Feed" during an era when many candies were named after farm goods.
- *An old Halloween superstition is, people at one time believed that Satan was a nut-gatherer, so, on Halloween night, nuts were used as magic charms.
- *The original name of the famous chocolate-and-peanut-butter candy, created by H.B. Reese before it became widely known as Reese's Peanut Butter Cups back in 1928 as "Penny Cups", because they were sold individually for one cent each in department stores.
- *Dogs are believed to be aware of the presence of ghosts, and their barking, whimpering or howling is often the first warning of supernatural occurrences.
- *In 1967, the Ouija Board ended up outselling the game of Monopoly. Over two million copies of the Ouija Board were sold.
- *Turnip Jack-o'-Lanterns: Long before American pumpkins, the Irish carved terrifying faces into hollowed-out turnips and beets with glowing embers inside to ward off the wandering soul of "Stingy Jack".
- *On Friday 13th, It is believed by superstitious people that you should never get out of bed on the opposite side to the one you got in on. If you do, you're at risk of something unlucky happening.
- *In ancient times, it was believed that witches became cats at night!

FUNNY JOKES

DOCTOR'S OFFICE JOKE

The orthopedic surgeon I work for was moving to a new office across town, and his staff was helping transport many of the items. I sat the display skeleton in the front of my car, his bony arm across the back of my seat. I hadn't considered the drive across town. And so, at one traffic light, the stares of the people in the car beside me became obvious, and I looked across and explained, "I'm delivering him to my doctor's office." The other driver leaned out of his window, "I hate to tell you, lady," he said, "but I think it's a bit too late for that!"

QUIZ

4. Is a pumpkin botanically classified as a fruit or a vegetable?
5. What is the fear of Friday, 13th called?
6. What is the name of Harry Potter's first racing broom?

Answers

1. May 26th, 1897.
2. Winifred, Sarah, and Mary.
3. October 31, 2039.
4. Fruit.
5. Paraskevidekatriphobia.
6. Nimbus 2000.

PAW-SCOPES

DOGS:

Your dog is charming, easy going, and sociable. If you have friends over, let him or her be among your guests. They love dressing up in trick or treat costumes, but remember that human treats are not good for dogs. Make sure to have lots of special Halloween doggie treats available so they won't feel left out!

CATS:

Determination is the guiding force of the Cat...and it is indeed a force to be reckoned with. Felines in general are never easy to fathom and this particular feline is akin to a never-ending pit, being secretive, self-controlled and devious. You might find that Halloween may bring out some unusual behavior during this time. Call it a sixth sense!

Did you know . . . !

The famous quote from William Shakespeare's Macbeth is: "Double, double, toil and trouble; Fire burn, and cauldron bubble." Spoken by the Three Witches in Act IV, Scene 1, this chant accompanies the creation of a sinister potion intended to trap Macbeth in a web of destructive illusions.

Myths & Superstitions

*If a bat flies into your house, beware! You may have some ghosts or spirits visiting!

*When spiders spin their webs before noon, sunny weather's coming soon.

*Through history in ancient Greece, Asia and America, Owls have been a symbol of wisdom and magic and bring good luck.

*If you walk into a spider web, you will meet a friend that day.

*In Greek superstition, salt has great purifying powers and can be used to ward off demons and evil spirits.

*Did you know, Selenophobia is a fear of the moon.

*It is said that if you ring bells on Halloween, it will chase away evil spirits.

Candy Apples

The fusion of Celtic and Roman traditions is behind Halloween's candy-apple staple. Samhain was around the time of the Roman festival honoring Pomona, the goddess of fruit trees. The goddess is often symbolized by an apple, so the fruit became synonymous with Samhain celebrations of the harvest.

Halloween's origins date back to the ancient Celtic festival of Samhain (pronounced sow-in). The Celts, who lived 2,000 years ago, mostly in the area that is now Ireland, the United Kingdom and Northern France, celebrated their New Year on Nov 1st.

Cats of Witchcraft

Cats can be harbingers of coming prosperity and good fortune.

A cat of three colors is extremely lucky and will keep a house from harm

A smutty-nosed cat will bring wealth to its companions

Stroking a cat's tail nine times grants good luck in love

And just sharing your home with cats will bring you many blessings

Cats are known to hold the spirit of the witch they belong to and will protect wiccans against evil

You can buy the book in paperback on Amazon here

This book will walk you through your decision to bring home a pet, all the way through to their last day and beyond.

FINALLY!

A detailed book about pet care written by someone in the veterinary field!

A pet owner's guide to help answer some questions, dispel common misconceptions, and pull back the curtain on what happens "in the back" at veterinary hospitals.

HALLOWEEN

Pet Safety Tips

NO SWEETS FOR YOUR SWEETIE

Keep your pets away from candy (especially chocolate); avoid placing bowls on the ground.

KEEP PUMPKIN AWAY FROM THE PUMPKIN

Decorative plants can be toxic; candle-lit jack-o-lanterns are fire hazards if tipped over.

COSTUMES ARE OPTIONAL

Don't force on an unwanted costume. Most pets prefer birthday suits.

NO TRICK OR TREATER GREETERS

The front door is a high traffic area. Doorbells and knocks can upset even the friendliest pets.

MUST SHOW I.D.

Spooked pets can get lost. Microchip and tag them in case they get out.

PARTY POOPERS ARE OK

Some pets are happier in a quiet room away from the party.

Petz Gazette.com

Olde Folklore

The practice of "Burning the Nuts," a once solemn omen for a relationship's future, became the courting game of "Nut Crack Night."

New games like "Snap Apple" (the origin of bobbing for apples) emerged, where the focus was on community fun and competition and not supernatural revelation.

The rite of soul cakes: Modern trick-or-treating evolved from this ancient ritual. On All Hallows' Eve, families offered "soul cakes" to visitors, who in return would pray for the souls of the family's deceased members. This transaction eventually transformed into the child-focused activity of collecting candy.

The original Jack-o'-Lantern: Before pumpkins, the Irish and Scottish carved grotesque faces into turnips and potatoes. A candle was lit inside to create a protective totem meant to ward off evil spirits. In America, the larger, native pumpkin was adopted and soon became the holiday's central icon.

A Witch's Hat:

The cone-shaped hat worn by most fictional witches is called a pointed hat. Pointed hats have been associated with witches for centuries. In fact, the earliest known depiction of a witch wearing a pointed hat is from a 14th-century manuscript. There are a few theories about why witches are associated with pointed hats.

You don't have to worry about Daylight Savings Time at Halloween. The holiday is always on Green Witch Mean Time.

Western Union opened an office in a graveyard so the spooks could send and receive cryptograms.

A vampire joined the police force so he could learn the correct way to get a stakeout.

I threw a boomerang at a ghost the other day. I knew it would come back to haunt me.

Halloween is going to be great - I can feel it in my bones!

I didn't want to play it safe with a skeleton costume, I want people to know I have guts.

Did you ever wonder where the whole Jack-o-Lantern thing came from? Well, before there were flashlights and glow sticks, Irish people used to carve out turnips and put a candle in them for a lantern. When they came to America, they noticed there weren't many turnips, but lots of pumpkins, so they used pumpkins instead!

DOG SUPERSTITIONS

Dogs have always been credited with the power of sensing supernatural influences, and seeing ghosts, spirits, faeries or deities which are invisible to human eyes. In Wales, only dogs could see the death-bringing hounds of Annwn; In ancient Greece the dogs were aware when Hecate was at a crossroads foretelling a death.

Did you know . . . !

*The first Halloween card was made in the early 1920's. These days, over 28 million Halloween cards are sent each year. U.S. consumers spend about $50 million on Halloween greetings.

*Mary Shelly (1797 - 1851) published Frankenstein, or The Modern Prometheus Gothic novel when she was only 21. The novel was published in 1818 and is considered to be one of the first examples of science fiction.

THE HALLOWEEN HOUSE RULES

Costumes are encouraged.

The porch light stays on.

There is always room for one more.

Candy may be eaten before supper.

Ghost stories begin after dark.

Cider stays warm on the stove.

Anyone who screams during the movie makes the popcorn.

Black cats are always welcome.

No one goes to bed until the last trick-or-treater has gone home.

Halloween is celebrated in many different ways around the world.

Here's a few examples:

China: The Hungry Ghost Festival, celebrated in the summer, is a time to honor ancestors by leaving food and drink out for their spirits.

Japan: The Obon festival includes haunted houses, parades, dancing, and boats lit with lanterns.

Guatemala: The Festival de Barriletes Gigantes, or "giant kites" festival, is an ancient Mayan tradition that involves flying kites over graves.

Italy: Ognissanti, or "all saints", is celebrated on November 1, and in Sicily, the deceased are said to bring gifts to children.

Haiti: The Festival of the Dead, or Fet Gede, is celebrated on November 1 and 2, and involves dancing in the streets and walking through graveyards.

Austria: Martinis is celebrated on November 11 with costumes and a lantern procession.

Belgium: Some villages celebrate Halloween, while others celebrate All Saints' Day.

South Korea: Itaewon in Seoul hosts festivities including live music, costume contests, and dancing.

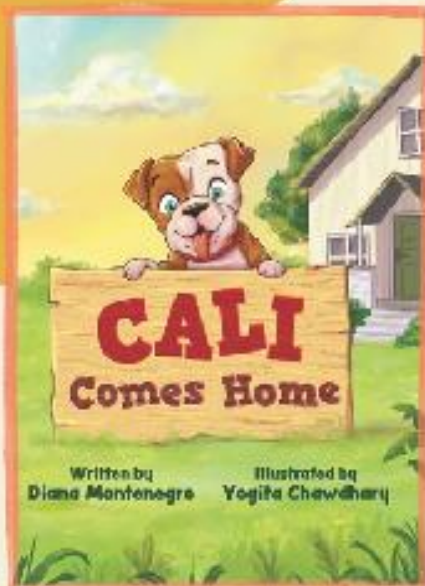

Thailand: Expats celebrate with special Halloween bashes at major nightlife spots.

Greece: Expatriates and tourists celebrate in hotels and bars.

Brazil: Brazil celebrates Halloween, or Dia das Bruxas (Witch's Day), on October 31st with costume parties and other festivities.

THE SOUL DOG BOOK SERIES

By: Diana Montenegro

At It's Heart: Cali Comes Homes is about...

- ✿ The meaning of "forever home"
- ✿ The joy of pet adoption
- ✿ The special bond between humans and their soul dogs
- ✿ Kindness, compassion, and the importance of dog rescue

First-time author and educator Diana Montenegro spent years helping students find their voice and love of reading. But her most meaningful story began with a dog named Cali. Cali was more than a pet; she was Diana's "soul dog." Their bond was immediate, deep, and life-changing. Tragically, Cali passed away before her third birthday, and in the midst of that heartbreak, Diana began The Soul Dog Series, writing Cali Comes Home as the first book in the series to honor and continue Cali's legacy.

She donates a portion of the proceeds from her books to animal rescue organizations—the same kind of organizations that gave Cali and her mother a chance at life. Through her writing, she hopes not only to inspire children to read but also to teach them the importance of adoption, empathy, and giving back. Her goal is to spark joy, build literacy, and help others discover their own "soul dog" while keeping Cali's memory alive.

Now joined by her dog Chloe, who is also featured in the book, Diana visits schools, bookstores, and community events, creating meaningful, interactive experiences where children can connect stories to real-life relationships with animals. Please follow along on Instagram to see the series grow.

QUIRKY HALLOWEEN SUPERSTITIONS

Itchy Palms Mean Money

An itchy right palm supposedly means money is coming, and an itchy left means it's leaving, though which palm does which flips depending on who taught you. The belief traces back through European folklore connecting the hands to receiving and giving.

Ringing Ears

A sudden ringing in your ear traditionally means someone is talking about you. Older versions were spookier: the sound was a message, or a warning, from the spirit world.

Lucky Pennies

Find a penny heads up and it's luck; tails up and some people won't touch it. The roots likely reach back to when metal itself was considered a gift from the gods, and any found coin was a small blessing.

Crossing Your Fingers

The crossed fingers likely began as an invocation of the cross for protection, possibly from eras when the gesture had to be hidden or shared between two people. Over time it shrank to one hand and became casual.

Shoes on the Table

In British tradition, shoes on a table invite death into the house. One grim explanation ties it to mining communities, where a dead miner's boots were placed on the table as notice to the family.

The Empty Rocking Chair

An empty rocking chair rocking on its own is bad enough. Irish folklore went further: leaving a chair rocking was an open invitation for a spirit to sit down, bringing death or misfortune to the household.

Whistling Indoors and After Dark

Across several cultures, whistling in the wrong place or time is asking for trouble. Russian tradition says whistling indoors whistles your money away, while other folklore warns that whistling at night calls spirits, or snakes, to you. Sailors banned casual whistling too, believing it could literally whistle up a storm.

Sweeping Someone's Feet

In Southern U.S. and Caribbean folklore, sweeping a broom across someone's feet curses their marriage prospects, or worse, sweeps them toward jail or death. The remedy, in some versions, is to spit on the broom immediately. Brooms carry heavy folklore everywhere, since they touch both dirt and thresholds. Never underestimate an object that guards the doorway.

Opening an Umbrella Indoors

One story dates this to ancient Egypt, where parasols honored the sun and opening one indoors, away from the sun, insulted it. A more practical theory blames Victorian umbrellas, spring-loaded contraptions that could genuinely injure someone in a parlor.

A Bird in the House

A wild bird flying into the house has long been read as a death omen, especially if it circles a room or lands on a chair. Birds were seen as messengers between worlds, so one indoors meant a message had arrived for someone.

The Owl's Call

Owls have played the death messenger in folklore from ancient Rome to Appalachia, where an owl calling near a house, or worse, calling your name, foretold a passing. Their silent flight and night vision made them natural suspects.

Someone Walked Over Your Grave

That sudden, unexplained shiver got an explanation centuries ago: someone just walked over the spot where you'll eventually be buried. The phrase appears in English writing back to the 1700s.

Covering Mirrors After a Death

In many traditions, from Victorian Britain to Jewish mourning custom, mirrors in a house of mourning are covered. The folk-belief version held that a soul could become trapped in the mirror, or that the next person to see their reflection would follow the deceased.

Holding Your Breath Past a Cemetery

The schoolyard version says hold your breath or the spirits will get jealous of your breathing. Older versions warn you might inhale a wandering soul outright.

The Theater Ghost Light

Nearly every theater leaves a single bare bulb burning on stage all night, the ghost light. The practical reason is not falling into the orchestra pit in the dark. The traditional reason is better: every theater has ghosts, and the light either keeps them at bay or gives them enough light to perform, keeping them content. Professional stagehands maintain this ritual in gleaming modern venues, and no one is eager to be the first to skip it.

Saying “Bless You”

The reflexive blessing after a sneeze carries multiple spooky origin stories. One holds that a sneeze briefly expelled the soul, leaving the body open for something else to move in unless a blessing sealed the door. Another ties it to plague eras, when a sneeze could be a death sentence and the blessing was sincere.

The Horseshoe Over the Door

The horseshoe combines two ancient protections: iron, which spirits and fairies supposedly cannot abide, and the crescent shape, a luck symbol across many cultures. Nailed over a door, it guarded the home's most vulnerable point. The eternal argument is orientation. Points up holds the luck in a cup; points down pours the luck onto everyone who enters.

Knocking on Wood

Say something hopeful out loud and the tax is immediate: knock on wood. The leading theory ties it to old beliefs that spirits lived in trees, and knocking either woke the protective ones or drowned out your boast so jealous ones couldn't hear it. It may be the single most practiced superstition in the Western world, performed daily by devout skeptics. People will knock on laminate, particleboard, or their own heads, because the ritual matters more than the lumber.

Spilled Salt

Salt was once genuinely precious, used as currency and preservation, so spilling it was real loss before it was bad luck. Folklore added that spilled salt was the Devil's invitation, and a famous painting showing a spilled salt cellar in front of a betrayer didn't help its reputation. The repair ritual survives intact: throw a pinch over your left shoulder, straight into the eyes of the Devil waiting there.

Walking Under a Ladder

A leaning ladder forms a triangle with the wall and ground, and one old explanation holds that walking through it broke a sacred shape, echoing the Trinity. Earlier associations were grimmer: ladders leaned against gallows, and passing beneath meant walking the condemned's path.

The Broken Mirror

Seven years of bad luck for a broken mirror combines two old ideas: that reflections held a piece of your soul, and a Roman-era belief that life renewed itself in seven-year cycles. Break the mirror, damage the soul, wait out the cycle.

Friday the 13th

Thirteen was distrusted long before the slasher films: thirteen guests at the Last Supper, and in Norse myth, a thirteenth god crashing a dinner that ended in death. Fridays carried their own dark reputation as the day of the Crucifixion and, historically, the customary day for executions.

Fuse the unlucky number with the unlucky day and you get a date some people genuinely rearrange their lives around. There are several clinical names for the fear, i.e., Friggatriskaidekaphobia or Paraskevidekatriaphobia, and some estimates suggest real money in delayed flights and postponed decisions every time the date rolls around, though the figures are rough. Meanwhile hotels and towers still commonly skip the 13th floor on the elevator panel. The 14th floor is the 13th floor wearing a name tag, and everyone has silently agreed not to mention it.

The Black Cat Crossing Your Path

The most famous spooky superstition on earth is also the most unfairly assigned. The black cat began as a sacred animal: ancient Egyptians revered cats so completely that harming one carried severe punishment. The fall came in medieval Europe, when church authorities linked cats to witchcraft and heresy. A black cat crossing your path was reframed as a witch, or the Devil, cutting across your way, and Puritans shipped that fear straight to America. Here's the twist most people never learn: in Britain, Ireland, and Japan, a black cat crossing your path is traditionally good luck. Sailors' wives kept black cats to protect husbands at sea, and a black cat at a wedding was a blessing. So the same cat, same crossing, means opposite fortunes depending on which side of an ocean you learned your superstitions.
